BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., July 8.—
Coay Gray Gables is bathed in warm sunlight this morning, and the early existence of the new Miss Cleveland, the personage who was born at 4.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and in whom the residents of Buzzard's Bay are today most interested, is marked by weather which promises a very bright and happy future for the little stranger if the day is an omen.

So he had no difficulty in putting a look of genuine welcome on his face as he bent over his third daughter to seek those fleeting resemblances which only a parent's eyes are ever able to discover. And when he saw the newspaper men in the evening he was beaming, but would not talk about it.

Grover Cleveland calls Mrs. Cleveland Frankle. He has interesting names for his bables, very original names, but he would not like to see them in print and so they shall not be printed.

Bince Mr. Cleveland's second term as President began Mrs. Cleveland's bables have occupied most of her time. Ruth was born in October, 1891, and Esther in July, 1832.

They are very beautiful and very intelligent children.

They are very beautiful and very intelligent children. This is what happens when Mr. Cleveland wants to show one of his bables to a friend. "Frankie," he shouts, "bring Ruth in, here's Mr.—wants to see her." Then appears Mrs. Cleveland, in a high state of excitement. "I can't let you see her now she's going to play on the grass, and she's going to play on the grass, and she's got a dirty apron on. "Then," says Grover Cleveland, "never mind the apron, bring her in," and in she comes, a very shy but very winsome child. Unkind and utterly unfounded rumors have been circulated concerning Mrs. Cleveland's children. They cannot be too emphatically contradicted. If the little girl now drawing her first breaths at Buzzard's Bay is like her sisters she will be a fine baby and a credit to her family.
